Description \(revised\)

Item Specifics - Video Game Systems

Platform: Atari

Format: NTSC (US, Canada)

Bundled Items: Accessories

Condition: New

You are bidding on a rare prototype version of the popular Atari Jaguar game system. Most people do not know that before the Jaguar as we know it came out today, Atari intended the system to be a wildlife simulator.

The reason this unit never got past the prototype stage is for a few reasons:

1 - Unit was extremely heavy. The carrying case was made out of thick steel and the prototype units themselves vary in weight from 150-250 pounds! Below is a picture of the carrying case you will receive (please note our lovely model is not included):

2 - There were only two levels of difficulty. The user poked the system with a stick for the "Mildly Amusing" difficulty or one could open the case for the "Scared Shitless" difficulty.

3 - Maintenance was high. The system runs on water, raw meat, and live animals.

4 - News systems couldn't be made quickly. They had to be bred.

5 - System doesn't need to be hooked up to television, but when some people inadvertently inserted a set of A/V cables the system got really pissed off and killed whoever tried it (see picture below).

After 5 programmers mysteriously died while working on the project Atari decided to shelve the system and worked on a new design, the one more commonly found.

Due to weight, this item is extremely expensive to ship and may require a permit. System is in perfect health. Comes with the system (pictured above), carry case (also pictured above), and a stick to poke the system with.

Disclaimer: Please do not try to stick A/V cables in the unit! Seller is not responsible for the repercussions.

Bidding only open to DigitPress.com members as this auction was all a joke as a contest. Thanks for looking!
