Description

NWC Gold Console - SaD Beta Unit

AMAZING!! This is truly a one of a kind, never released, ultra-Mega Rare piece of Nintendo Hardware..
WOWZA!!!!

Here we have the fabled Nintendo World Championship Gold Console, only ever seen by a very select group of finalists in the 97' Nintendo World Championship tournament and a piece of the highly classified and controversial history of a time at which Nintendo pushed both gaming excitement and the console wars TO THE MAX!!

This incredible console is the last model of the SNES ever created and was only ever used outside of Nintendo R'n'D during the final round of their 97' NWC tournament in which the lucky winner was presented with one of these custom made gold units, much as the winners of the Nintendo's NES NWC tournament were presented with the infamous special gold NWC carts!!!!

These Gold unit's are actually beta unit's (WOW! WOW!! WOW!!!) of the advanced model SNES which Nintendo developed following their failed collaboration with sony to create the SNES CD. Nintendo didn't just set out to make their hardware competative, they made it to destroy the competition.. and let me tell you this console is one bad mother!!

Project codename "SaD SNES", Nintendo implemented advanced technical features to allow their console to take the console wars beyond the consumer market and right into the homes of consumers everywhere - IN YOUR FACE!!. Not only can this console play all of your favorite Super Nintendo titles it also comes fully equipped with atmospheric thrusters, SMEG (side mounted energy gun) and TITS (Tactical intelligent targetting system), allowing the console to Seek and Destroy any rival gaming hardware or software within it's target market area.

"Following the success of their NES World Championship Tournament Nintendo had sought to boost their profile by throwing another such tournament, this time centered around their 16-bit generation console. Nintendo had hoped to use the tournament to lauch their advanced SNES by using special Gold beta units of the console in the final round of the competition, in which they sought to make the Unit's SaD features part of the gaming entertainment by strapping rival brand Sega Consoles onto the backs of finalists, thereby forcing them to compete in a game of Star Fox 2 while simultaneously avoiding the Console's TITS and SMEG, and with one of the unit's finally being presented as a prize to the winner (just as the infamous special gold NWC gold carts had been awarded in their previous tournament).

Sadly while the finalists were truely gifted gamers, they lacked the nerve, and with it, the bladder control for such an adrenaline intensive final event, turning what could have been an incredible tournament finale into little more than a wet and wild turtle shoot. On the brighter side, when the power had been cut and the floor mopped dry, a lone survivor, critically injured and emotionally scarred, the plastic outer casing of the console he was carrying and it's Sega logo now fused to his spine, was declared the triumphant victor by default and awarded his prize in a special private ceremony held in the company of his friends, family and personal team of therapists and doctors (generously provided by Nintendo).

Following the events of the NWC Tournament and mounting pressure from international trading standards and humanitarian bodies, Nintendo opted not to persue a public release, citing in an internal memo that the consumer market was not yet prepared for features such as SMEG and TITS in their home console systems."

This console is rare!!.. R. A. R. E. Exclamation. Exclamation. you will NEVER get another chance to own something as awesome and rare as this!.. I shouldn't even have something as rare as this!, but I got lucky!, REAL LUCKY!!, the original owner's care worker gave it to me as compensation after it escaped and mistook my cat for a Master System.. SCORE!!

The system is in perfect working order and is in fantastic condition with it's original golden-yellow coloration perfectly intact without any fading whatsoever

Comes as Unit only, features include:

- Atmospheric Thrusters (Max hovering height: 25ft)
- SMEG (High discharge)
- TITS
- Unique colour outer casing
- Compatible with all region Super Nintendo games*

* excludes SF, NTSC and PAL

DON'T MISS OUT!!! This is a genuine one of a kind, there haven't even been any sightings of another one of these, not even anything like it!, without a doubt it's definately 1000/10 rarity. In fact, short of hiring a crack team of Cyborg Ninja Pigmies to raid Nintendo's R'n'D lab you will never have another chance of getting one of these again, this is the only chance there is for you to own such a bowel-twistingly important piece of gaming history!!!!
